The Art Program has been responsible for many of the “value added” aspects of campus life at Yuba College. Glenn Husted, for example, has his students brighten up an afternoon during both the Spring and Fall Term with a display and sale of ceramics developed through his program. These ceramic items are beautiful, reasonably priced, and have made great gifts for the holidays. By the same token, Sara Sealander, for several decades, has been developing young artists to transfer into baccalaureate programs throughout much of the U.S. while displaying their art in the exhibit hall of the Learning Resource Center – as well as other venues throughout the region.

The Art Instruction Fund provides Professors Sara Sealander and Glenn Husted with new equipment, supplies and support materials for their talented art students. For whatever reasons, the old adage is true, when times get tough the arts are the first to suffer. So here’s a chance to help keep a couple longstanding Yuba College programs prosperous.
